Marineland Oceanarium on Palos Verdes Peninsula Near Completion

Construction of the spectacular Marineland of the Pacific at Palos Verdes is progressing rapidly and is scheduled for completion and opening on May first of next year according to Henry U. Harris of New York.

Harris, who is president of Oceanarium, Inc., owners and operators of the marine spectacle, is here on an inspection tour of the new property. With him on the tour are William L. Pereira of Pereira & Luckman, Los Angeles architects and engineers who designed the facilities, and Ray W. Smith, vice-president and general manager of the project.

"The units now nearing completion are two huge oceanarium tanks, a restaurant, observation pier, administrative headquarters and service buildings. These are located on 65 acres at Long Point, Palos Verdes. Cost of acquisition and construction is $3,000,000," Harris stated.

"However, we do not expect to start construction with these structures," Harris continued. "Interest in fish and fishing is so great on the Pacific Coast that public interest will dictate many new facilities and additions at a later date."

Pereira, who is senior partner of Harris-Upham Investment Co. of New York, said the oceanarium would exhibit great varieties of marine specimens such as shark, octopus, manta ray, and other sea monsters, all living peacefully together. Up to 1800 visitors will be able to view each tank, at each feeding.

According to General Manager Ray W. Smith, experience gained at the world-renowned Marine Studios in Florida helps make the California project even greater. Additionally, probably twice the variety of sea specimens will be available in near Pacific waters as are found near Florida. Both sport and commercial fishermen will be encouraged by their exceptional and strange marine captives to Marineland.
